

Abstract by John Clay - Aiding Selection Decisions for Dairy Females Using Genomics and Sexed Semen

With the ready availability and declining cost of low density SNP chips, dairy producers can make important female selection decisions using gPTAs at a reasonable expense. When this technology is combined with the use of sexed semen, the costs of replacement females can be reduced while accelerating the herd's genetic progress.