

Abstract by Marion Ferrand - Determination of protein composition in milk by mid-infrared spectrometry

The fine milk composition is currently studied with attention, some components being of a particular interest. To get a better description of these components, it is necessary to have rapid and reliable methods to analyze several hundreds of milk samples in order to estimate genetic and environmental effects on milk quality.